Space...It's Closer Than You Think™
Celebrating the Future of Commercial Space Travel

Los Angeles, California October 4th, 2007

Event Details

Location: Hotel Luxe, 11461 Sunset Blvd. Bel Air, California

Date: October 4th, 2007

Time: 6:30- 9:00pm

Who: Rick Citron, space financier and founding partner of Citron and Deutsch and Gwynne Shotwell, Vice President of Business Development with Space X will each give a concise presentation about the state of the space industry and where it is going.

This kick-off event for 62 Mile Club will help promote commercial space enterprise and our role in promoting the space experience. In addition, this date also marks the 50th anniversary of the Sputnik launch as well as the 3rd anniversary of the Ansari X PRIZE winning flight of Spaceship One.

We are inviting high net worth and high caliber individuals who could be the future customers and investors in the space industry. They will hear from the 'movers and shakers' about the status of the industry and how it could influence their future.

The goal of the event is to convert the uninitiated and provide an awareness of what this industry is about to a high caliber demographic. The evening will consist of networking with cocktails and hors d'oeuvres from 6:30-7:30 followed by the featured presentations. It is our hope that people go home excited about commercial space enterprise and will want to know more about how they can become involved.

Our group's mission is to promote the commercial space industry to future customers, investors, and the general high-end demographic.

Sponsors include: Wyle Laboratories, XCOR Aerospace, USC Marshall Center for Technology Commercialization, Space Tourism Society, Space Frontier Foundation, X PRIZE Foundation (Sponsorship opportunities available)
